A Duty Which Every Man Owes to His Wife and Children.

Death is always a sorrow, but when to that are added complications and annoyances that a little forethought, a little preparation, might have spared those who are battling with bitter grief and loneliness, it is most cruel.

There is many a father of a family who, while doing his utmost for his children while he is in health, and making the best provision he can for them in anticipation of his own death, wholly neglects to put such provision in a tangible shape, where it can be readily understood and manipulated by the mother or other guardian in case of his death coming suddenly. A $2; teamsters, $1.75. case recently came to our notice where property of considerable value was so $1.23; tower, $1.33; wet machine, tied up with legal restrictions, owing $1.20; grinders, $1.25; machinists, entirely to lack of a few formalities which could have been attended to in a day's work, that the widow and children were kept for more than a year dependent upon the good will of friends before money could be made available. Death is not ordinarily hastened by making preparations for it, and the subject should not be avoided on account of its unpleasant character. Many a model husband and father, whose business methods are of the most methodical and strictly honorable kind, would find ample occasion to blame himself for neglect if he would consider for a moment in what confusion his family would be placed if this day should prove his once a year, a written statement of all one's affairs at that time, and file it. in an envelope with the wife's name upon it, in a particular place which she and perhaps one other person shall know of, if not in her own custody. Such a memorandum should contain description of life insurance policies or similar documents and state where a will, if any, is to be found; incumbrances of any kind should be noted:

unfinished transactions should be briefly described, that their status may be fully understood; and even if there exists no property whatever, a written statement to that effect would relieve doubt and avoid needless inquiry and another genuine surprise, however, suspense, in case one's business affairs were of a fluctuating nature she made this query: which could not always be closely followed by the wife or fully explained to her. ABOUT DYSPEPSIA.

How to Conquer the Great American Foe

Some time ago consumption was called the curse of America. We have made a good fight against it, and statistics show that the large average of deaths from pulmonary disease is filled out by the mortality from that cause among the native-born foreigners, that is, the children of those who emigrated to this country twenty or thirty years ago. Among native Americans of the better classes consumption is steadily on the decrease.

The great American foe to health and comfort now is dyspepsia. Worries of all kinds, domestic and business troubles, irregular , hours, dissipation of any kind and fast or over-hearty eating are prominent causes of dyspepsia, and headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, blood difficulties, debility and grave mental troubles are some of the attendant evils that wait upon the malady.

The cure for aggravated forms of the disease has not yet been discovered, and, knowing this, one should begin in time and heed the warning given by the first symptom of indigestion; self-denial in diet is not too high a price to pay for exemption from a life of discomfort. Plain good living, with meals slowly eaten at regular hours, and plenty of open-air exercise should be the rule with those who have a wholesome dread of dyspepsia. Intelligent people are learning that stomach trouble is often begun in infancy and the diet for young children is now wisely ordered in well-regulated nurseries. Cakes, pies, puddings and confectionery are very properly conspicuous by their absence, and, not seeing the pernicious dainties, the children satisfy their healthy young appetites on simple, nutritious fare. Keeping temptation out of their sight is an argument in favor of children sating apart from the family, but it is only in large establishments that this | 000 of a second. When at the family table it is hard to refuse to give them the things they see their elders eating, but better suffer the pain of denying ferent individuals, children and old them than have them grow up to be victims of dyspepsia. - Good Cheer.

A delicate electrical apparatus has been devised which measures and sible to determine how long it takes to think. The process of thought varies in its degree of rapidity in difpersons thinking slower than people of middle age, ignorant people thinking more slowly than educated persons. WHERE NEATNESS PAYS.

Advantages Incident to the Good Appearance of a Farm.

It can hardly be realized by a farmer who has never tried the plan of keeping every thing about his farm in repair, and the yards and fields in neat order, what an improvement can be made in the attractiveness of a place in this way. Not only will this largest mail order cigar house in the world, attention to the appearance of a farm be a source of gratification to those who occupy it, but it will add a money value by giving a much more favorable impression to those who see it. Visitors or passers-by from a distance remember such a place, and their recollection of it being pleasant, they mention it to others. The sale of a farm at a good price has often been brought about in this way.

The difference in value is more than purchaser, when he compares a farm medical paper; but very few neglect the P where all is kept tidy and neat with one where neglect is everywhere manifest. The farms may have the same number of acres, and the buildings on the neglected one may have originally cost more than those on the other, perhaps were erected some time later, but for all that the buyer of taste is attracted by the well-cared-for place, CATTLE-Native Steers. $ 4 30 @ 5 50 and the other suffers much more by comparison than the value of the time records the duration of time to 1-10, - and money required to secure the difference in the appearance of the two

Where attention is given to repairs promptly, the expense is trifling, and the time required to keep the yards about the buildings in neat order is very little if the work is not neglected, but is done before it accumulates. Perhaps nothing detracts from the appearance of a farm more then fences and gates out of repair, saying nothing of the danger of loss and damage by the escape of the owner's stock, ing to his neighbors. Annoyance and loss from this cause can be easily and

They are taken into mouth to keep down a worse smell, and they don't even do that; they simply produce a smell compounded of vileness and frawater on a dung-hill. When I smell cloves on a man's breath my first thought is, "That man is a fool." He thinks he is concealing the smell of whisky or some other vile smell, and he is only advertising it. There is another reason, also, why he is a fool. The oil of cloves, which is expressed from them by chewing them, is an active solvent of the enamel of the teeth.
